ABSTRACT

This report provides an overview of selected data items covering the 67 school districts in Florida. The data presentation is divided into two parts. Statewide data are displayed in both tabular and graphic forms. Individual district data are arranged in tabular form and entered one district per page in alphabetical order. Examples of the data items included are per capita income; total revenue; percent of revenue by local, state, and federal sources; expenditures for administration, instruction, and capital outlay; total current expense; average salary; enrollment, number of full-time instructional personnel; and other similar data. INTRODUCTION

Like Projection Techniques for the Non-Statistically Inclined, this report is intended to be useful in long range planning which is not rigorous in character. To formulate adequate long range plans, access to a wide range of data types is needed over a fairly lengthy period of time. This publication, the first in its series, presents some of that information.

Most of the data items included in this document have been and will continue to be published annually in various research reports and briefs. Still others will be found, in an adapted form, in the Commissioner's Report and in statistical abstracts.

In keeping with the intent of this report, all data have been collected and exhibited on a district by district basis. The reason for this is twofold: first, it aids in annual comparisons; and second, it discourages comparisons between districts. This latter reason is most important in that despite uniform procedures, differences still exist among the districts as to what items are included in the determination of a particular piece of data. In addition, the relative magnitude of data is often considered to be a measure of educational excellence, however, since product measures are few and opinion differs concerning their importance, these comparisons could easily result in spurious conclusions.

No data contained herein will indicate how good or how bad a district's program may be, nor can any major generalization affecting all districts be made with this information. Any serious inquiry regarding the quality of education will require data much more complex than the indicators exhibited here.

The data provided in this report are selective and were chosen to provide the broadest spectrum of insight into past and projected growth patterns state-wide and in each of Florida's sixty-seven districts. Since FY 1948, the first year for which data are displayed in this document, the procedures of collection and the nature of the statistics have changed several times. In order to avoid many discontinuities, some of the older data have been recalculated according to current procedures. For example, in the calculation of the percent of revenue from local and state sources prior to FY 1956, racing commission funds were subtracted from the local total and added to the state total. The description of the data elements (pp. 3-11) clearly specifies the nature of each item and should eliminate confusion.

The presentation of the data in this report is divided into two parts: state-wide data in two forms, tabular and graphic, for easy reference; and individual districts in tabular form only. For each district the data elements comprise twenty-six banks and are presented on a single page. In those instances where data were not available, blanks have been left, and in those where special calculating was necessary or the information may be located elsewhere, footnotes referring to the item description are provided in the data item descriptions.

Because of the diverse nature of the information contained in this report, no data should be used without consulting the description of the data elements first. Most data is presented by fiscal years, however, since there are exceptions, care should be exercised in interpreting the profile.

DATA ITEM DESCRIPTIONS

The following pages provide descriptions of each of the data elements found in this report. Each description provides the primary and secondary sources of the information, a short definition (when clarification is needed), the method of calculation, the period of calculation, and notes to explain particular facts. The descriptions are presented in the same order in which the data appear in the tables.
